

Syllabus for Justin Kalef's PHIL 107-01, Fall 2021 Course (Online, Synchronous)

Note: This is an unusual course, and many things on this syllabus may be unfamiliar or mysterious to you. I discuss and clarify the entire syllabus in a series of video lectures here. I recommend watching those videos right away rather than reading this syllabus further on your own.

Meeting times and links: This course will meet online in two locations:

Mondays: 1:00 to 2:20pm on our Slack channel, here \(before attending for the first time, you'll have to accept the Slack invitation sent to your email address\)

Wednesdays: 1:00 to 2:20pm on Zoom, here.

Contact information and office hours: I can be reached by email at jkalef@philosophy.rutgers.edu. I will hold office hours online on Mondays and Wednesdays from 3pm to 4pm at my Zoom link.

Text: Wild Swans: Three Daughters of China by Jung Chang (Touchstone, 1991/2003)

Purpose: To introduce students to ethical thinking and to the purposes and methods of philosophy.

Method: This course will use active learning strategies and a flipped classroom format. Students will learn philosophy by engaging in their own original philosophical work, including the discovery and refining of moral principles. This will be done in an interactive and collaborative setting. Rather than hold lectures during class time and ask students to coordinate their own times for collaborative work, I will make all the lectures available for students to watch whenever they wish, and will reserve our scheduled class time for active, collaborative work.

Assessment: You will be assessed on the basis of the following work:

1. Qualifying Work (10 points) Due date: Wednesday, September 15th

This will almost certainly be the easiest work of the course. You simply have to show that you have attentively read the Week 1 documents and watched the Week 1 video lectures, and have logged in to our Slack site. Everything you need to know about the Qualifying Work can be found here.

Anyone not completing the Qualifying Work may not earn credit on any other work, and will fail the course! Please be sure that you get this done on time. If you are late, things become perilous, as you will discover here.

2. Argument mapping training (15 points) Due Date: Friday, October 1st

You can get started on this work right away by going here. A description of the grading can be found here.

3. Forum contributions (3 x 5 points = 15 points)

Instructions for forum contributions can be found here. Your contributions to the forum will be assessed at the end of three periods, each time earning you a score of 5 points. The closing dates for the three contributions, in order, are: October 20th, November 17th, and December 13th.

The forum is on our Canvas site, here.

4. Quizzes (10 x 2 points = 20 points)

Instructions for quizzes can be found here. There are fifteen, but you are evaluated only on the best ten you do. There are no makeup quizzes beyond the extra quizzes already available, regardless of excuses.

The link to the quizzes is on our Canvas site, here.

5. In-class teamwork (10 points x 2 = 20 points)

Details about the in-class teamwork can be found here. You will be assessed on this twice: once for your contributions to the teamwork in the first half of the course (Weeks 3-9), and once for your contributions to the teamwork in the second half (Weeks 10-16). Not everyone on a team will earn the same score, and free riding will not be a good strategy in this course.

The in-class teamwork will always take place during our Monday meetings, which take place on our Slack between 1pm and 2:20pm, Eastern Time. Here is another link to the Slack site.

6. Proposing and defending a moral principle (5 points x 2 = 10 points)

Details about this team activity can be found here. You will have three chances to do this work. I will drop your worst score out of the three. Again, not everyone on a team will earn the same score.

7. The presentation of counterexamples (5 points x 2 = 10 points)

Details about this activity can be found here. You will do this work individually. You may make up to four attempts. Your best two attempts will count toward your final score.

Makeup: Final exam (optional)

There is no need to take the final exam. It is merely a makeup exam. If you choose to take it, you must reserve a spot at the exam in advance, and indicate at that time which assignment category or categories you would like your final exam score to replace. You may choose any assignment categories, and any number of categories, other than the Qualifying Work. More details can be found here.

No other makeup work options or grade adjustments will be offered to any students in this course. Those who choose to take the final exam but miss the exam date will need a note from the Dean before they may take it again.

All this gives you a score out of 100. That score will be converted to a letter grade as follows:

90.000 or above = A

85.000 to 89.999 = B+

75.000 to 84.999 = B

70.000 to 74.999 = C+

60.000 to 69.999 = C

50.000 to 59.999 = D

49.999 or below = F
